Inspiration for this third-place coffee shop was southern hospitality and charm. The main dish that will be served here is biscuits which is where the inspiration for the interior came from. The lights over the countertop where customers will be able to place their order will mason jar lights while the lighting in other parts of the area will be classic but modern southern chandeliers. The color scheme will be classic, sticking to black and white and nothing says southern charm like a rocking chair so extra seating along the catwalk and in other areas will be rocking chairs. For the main seating the idea of having mostly chairs but one side being a bench adds to the concepts. Local artist will be able to have their work on display in distressed wooden china cabinets.

Design Statement

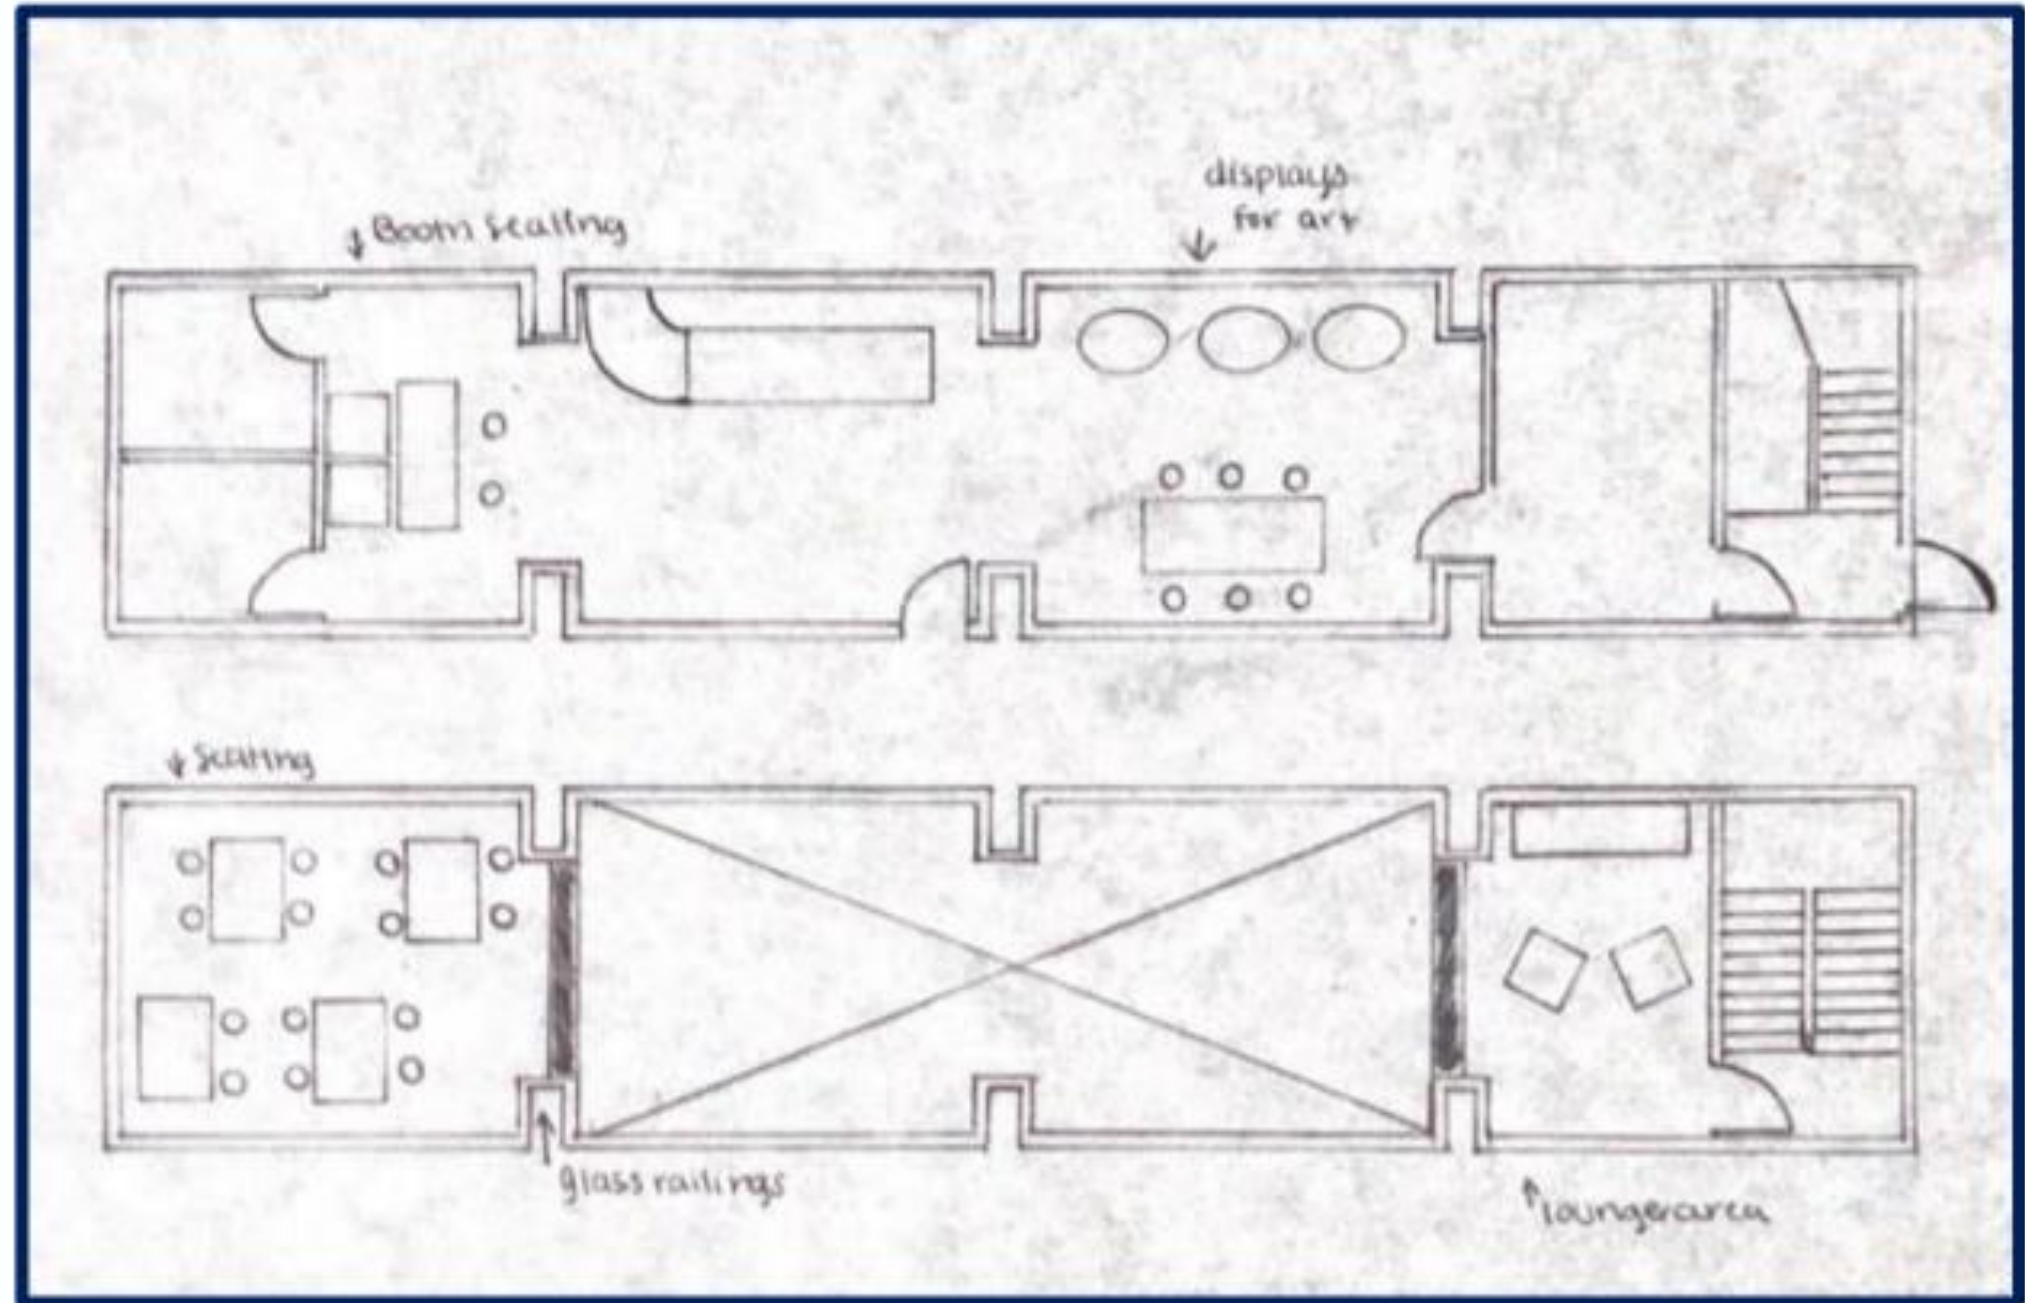

At the sight of this location there are a few design issues. With the windows being at the top of the building having natural light come in is difficult depending on the time of day and where someone is in the building. In order to solve this issue more lights will need to add to the lower part of the building because the windows are at the top. The building also only has one staircase leading upstairs and it is one side of the building. In case of a fire or emergency exit another staircase will need to be added to keep the flow of traffic.
