Hi! I'm Jasper. My moms are Pat and Fran and we just moved to this new place. I really like it here. There is plenty of space for me to run around and take naps in our new home. We just got home from a walk and I laid down in the living room right away. Boy, I am tired.

My moms go into the kitchen to get some glasses of water. We're all exhausted from our long walk. My mom Fran used to be a teacher at the place we used to live. She stays home a lot now so I don't think she works anymore. She can't really hear well lately so her and my other mom, Pat, sign.

They take a seat at the table to talk. My mom Pat used to do a lot of artwork and she was a teacher also. She isn't home as much as Fran, but I hear them talking about their future plans a lot.

All of the sudden, lights start flashing and I hear a bell. All of the sudden more people are here! My moms are so excited because their daughter Dana is here! She served our country and when she came back, she was missing a leg, but that's okay, I love her anyway. Moms are SO excited to see her.

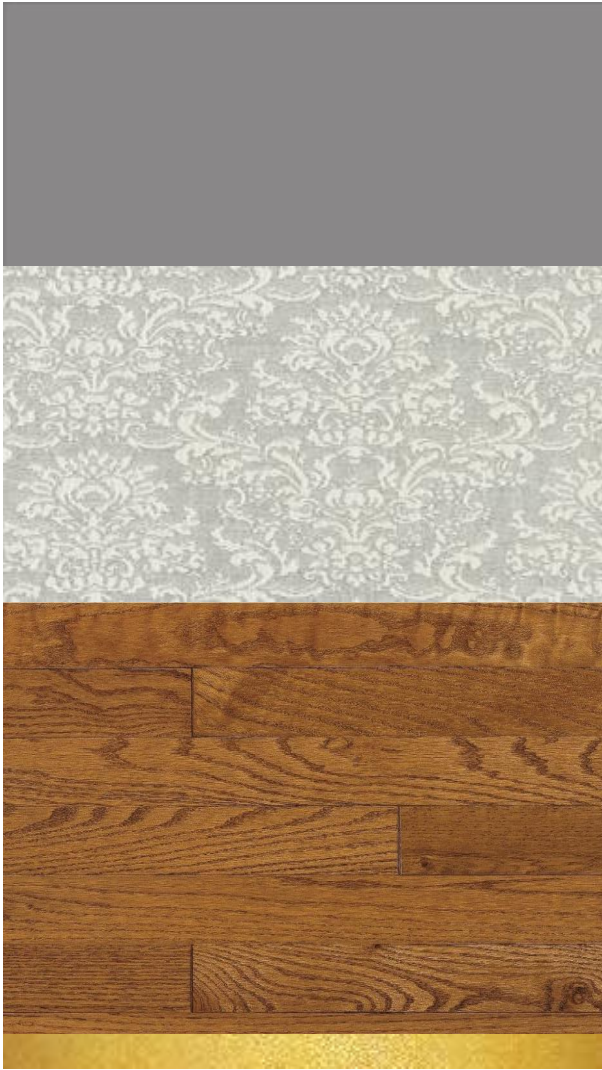

Dana hasn't seen the new place yet, so we show her around. We start with where she will be staying. There is enough space in her room so she can use her wheelchair; I think moms planned that.

Next they show her where my humans go to go potty. I don't know why they can't just go outside. Also, they come in here and when they come out sometimes, their fur is all wet and they smell so different.

The next place we go is where moms go and take naps for what feels like forever after it gets dark out. We go back into the living room because my moms want to go to talk to Dana all about her trip to us.

We head back into the living room and I lie down on the floor while my moms and Dana talk and sign for hours. They must have really missed each other. I only wish Dale, their son who lives far away, were here. Then it would be complete. As I drift off into a nap, I realize how happy I am that we get to live in this new place. Everyone seems happier here.

Historical Precedents – Louis XVI

Research:

- Louis XVI was introduced in France during the reign of Louis XVI (1774-1793).
- It incorporates the last phase of Rococo style and the first phase of the Neoclassicism style.
- Louis XVI has a lot of clean, elegant, straight lines in both the furniture and the architectural features.
- The furniture has straight, tapered legs that incorporate classical columns. They incorporate lyres, wreaths, cornucopias, sphinxes, and pharoahs into their motifs.
- Architecture uses a monumental yet elegant and refined scale. The walls incorporate symmetry in panes, moldings, paintings, wallpapers, mirrors, and other classical shapes.

How I Used Historical Precedents:

The client wished to incorporate both modern and historical elements, therefore, the style used has aspects of Louis XVI.

The clients love wall paneling and the style of upholstered furniture of the Louis XVI style, however, they wanted simple accent furniture, dining room table, a more modern kitchen, and modern bathrooms.

The clients love the Louis XVI style of the inherited seate, arm chairs in the living room, and the vitrine in the hallway. The clients wanted a modern sofa, I incorporated the sleek, clean lines of the Louis XVI style to really pull everything together.
